Trip Details:

Pisang Peak (6,091m/19,984ft) is located in the Annapurna region of Nepal. The peak lies roughly in between two gigantic Himalayan peaks, Annapurna I (8,091m/26,546ft) and Manaslu (8,163m/26,782ft). Pisang Peak rises above from Pisang village and yak pastures in a uniform slope of ice and snow to the final summit pyramid. The western flank of the mountain is guarded by a hanging glacier offering a considerable challenge. The western end of the ridge has more challenging climb. You will get stunning views of mountains at the Pisang Peak summit.

If you are looking for an adventurous trekking with some expeditions, then this trip is just ideal for you. We have combined this expedition including a trek over the Thorung la pass (5,416m/17,769ft). The Annapurna Circuit trekking is the most popular trekking trail in Nepal. The trek starts at Besi Sahar, about 175km far west from the capital city Kathmandu. The Pisang Peak Climbers get more distinct features than any other treks in Nepal by its variety of people, rich in culture, beautiful landscapes, mountain scenery and great biodiversity. The higher mountain area offer the spectacular Himalayan scenery and Tibetan plateau while the lower area support thick forest of rhododendron and fir trees.

Trip Itinerary:

Day 01 : Drive from Kathmandu to Besi-Sahar (823m/2,700ft).

Today we drive for 175km (109 miles) by bus or car to the small township of Besi-Sahar, the starting point for our Annapurna Circuit trek. Here we will have to present our entry permits at the check post. This is a scenic drive on the bank of the Trisuli and Marshyangdi Rivers. We pass through the beautiful villages along the way.

Day 02 : Trek Besi-Sahar to Bahundanda (1,310m/4,298ft).

After an overnight stay in Besi-Sahar, we start the trek to Bahundanda passing through the villages of Bhulbhule (840m/2,756ft) and Ngadi (930m/3,051ft). It should take around 5 to 6 hours from Besi-Sahar to Bahundanda.

Day 03 : Trek Bahundanda to Chamje (1,433m/4,701ft).

We continue our trek and after approximately 3 to 4 hours we reach the village of Jagat (1,314m/4,311ft) having passed through three other villages: Khanigaon (1,170m/3,839ft), Ghermu Phant (1,180m/3,871ft) and Syange (1,100m/3,609ft). From the village of Jagat which is tightly packed on a natural shelf among huge boulders and a few banana trees, it will take us approximately an hour to reach our overnight stop, the small paved village of Chamje. On this last stage of the day's trek we will get views of a very fine waterfall on the Chhahare Khola tributary on the eastern side of the valley. Trekking time 5-6 hours.

Day 04 : Trek Chamje to Dharapani (1,860m/6,100ft).

Today's trek starts through a gorge and goes downhill to a suspension bridge which crosses the Marshyangdi river to the east bank, then climbs steeply and it proceeds to Tal (1,700m/5,577ft) with its safe drinking-water station. After some downs and ups, we re-cross the river and enter Dharapani village for our overnight stay. Trekking time 5-6 hours.

Day 05 : Trek Dharapani to Chame (2,670m/8,760ft).

Today, proceeding on from Dharapani, we pass through the village of Bagarchhap (2,164m/7,100ft) – also with a safe drinking-water station – then on to Danaquyu (2,300m/7,546ft) from which there are good views of the Mt. Manaslu peak (8,163m/26,782ft). From here we proceed to Lata Manang (2,454m/8,051ft) and then pass through some landslide areas and pine forests to arrive at the two-part village of Koto (2,600m/8,530ft). A further easy half-hour stroll takes us into the town of Chame – with a safe drinking-water station – led in by a long mani (a Buddhist prayer wall) studded with prayer wheels. Snow-capped Annapurna II (7,937m/26,040ft), which overlooks the town, is a striking picture in the morning sunshine. Trekking time 5-6 hours.

Day 06 : Trek Chame to Lower Pisang (3,200m/10,499ft).

Today's trek takes us through the villages of Talekhu (2,720m/8,924ft), Bhratang (2,850m/9,350ft) and Dhikur Pokhari (3,185m/10,449ft) en-route. The entrance to Tibetan-style Bhratang has a long mani wall and many prayer flags, likewise Dhikur Pokhari, which also has cairn-shaped Buddhist shrines known as "chortens". The trekking route then takes us directly to Lower Pisang. Lower Pisang also has a long mani wall in its centre and a safe drinking-water station. Pisang Peak (6,091m/19,984ft) is clearly seen from Lower Pisang. Trekking time 5-6 hours.

Day 07 : Trek Lower Pisang to Upper Pisang (3,700m/12,139ft).

Today we continue our trek to Upper Pisang, the original Pisang village. It is a steep climb on a big hill. We stay overnight at lodge. Trekking time 1-2 hours. We relax for the rest of the day enjoying with the magnificent views of the Annapurnas, Gangapurna, Tilicho etc and get acclimatised.

Day 08 : Trek Upper Pisang to Pisang Peak Base Camp (4,420m/14,502ft). Basic training for climbing.

We trek from Upper Pisang to Base Camp ascending through the sparse wood and pasture to a Kharka at around 4,420 meters (14,502ft). We stop there considering the best place to set up as Base Camp. Trekking time 3-4 hours. After lunch, we will also take the opportunity to get familiar with our equipment; using crampons and ice axe, walking in plastic boots, fixed ropes will be set by our guide so that we can put into practice ascending using a "Jumar" and descending using a "figure-of-8" or belay device.

Day 09 : Climb Pisang Peak Base Camp to High Camp (5,450m/17,881ft).

Climbing day: Today we climb from Base Camp to High Camp. Our guide will lead us to reach the high camp. We stay overnight at high camp. Climbing period 4-5 hours.

Day 10 : Climb High Camp to Pisang Peak Summit (6,091m/19,984ft) and return to Upper Pisang.

Summit day: Finally, we are ready for the summit. We start our climbing at around 2am and follow our guide. He fixes the rope wherever necessary for our successful climb. We follow the guide along the well defined ridge that leads to the final snow slope which is quite steep and more technical to reach the summit. After enjoying with the successful summit and taking pictures, we descend back to Upper Pisang. Total climbing/trekking time 7-9 hours.

Day 11 : Spare day for weather.

The spare day is for smooth journey. We can use this day if the weather gets worse and we are unable to complete the summit on the planned day. This day can be useful if someone gets problems in acclimatising well enough to make the ascent.

Day 12 : Trek Upper Pisang to Manang (3,540m/11,614ft).

After an overnight stay in Upper Pisang, we descend back to Lower Pisang we trekked on day 9 and continue to Manang through the villages of Humde (3,280m/10,761ft), Mugje (3,482m/11,424ft) and Braga (3,360m/11,024ft). Humde is an important village on account of its STOL (short-take-off and landing aircraft) airstrip and police check post. It also has a safe drinking-water station. On leaving this village, the trail is as wide as a jeep track, which makes it easy underfoot and makes the walk to the small village of Mugje very enjoyable, with striking views of the two "Trekking Peaks" Chulu East and Chulu West, both above 6000 meters (19,685ft). Braga, also known as Bhraka, contains a number of Tibetan-style houses and the "gompa" (Buddhist temple) in the village is one of the most distinguished on the Annapurna circuit – well worth a visit. Finally, we arrive in Manang, the main village of the upper valley and one in which the majority of the inhabitants are more closely related to the people of Tibet. Trekking time 4-5 hours.

Day 13 : Rest and acclimatisation day in Manang.

Manang - the main village of the upper valley has a safe drinking-water station, a museum, surprisingly a cinema hall, and most importantly a Himalayan Rescue Association health post. Here at 3pm every afternoon, a volunteer doctor gives a speech on high altitude sickness. We may spend our day with excursions around the Manang village.

Day 14 : Trek Manang to Yak Kharka (4,018m/13,182ft).

Today's trek heads out of Manang via an old "kani" (a covered Buddhist archway) and after 30 minutes or so takes us through the village of Tangki (3,642m/11,949ft). After which the trail heads north-west with a view of Tilicho Peak (7,134m/23,406ft) in the west. Then we reach the small settlement of Gunsang (3,900m/12,795ft). Proceeding from here to Yak Kharka, there are very few steep ascents, but some magnificent views both fore and aft and interestingly, herds of blue sheep (Jharal) may sometimes be observed on the hillsides. As its name suggests Yak Kharka is located on a yak pasture – yak being a species of Tibetan ox. We stop at Yak Kharka for our overnight stay. Trekking time 3-4 hours.

Day 15 : Trek Yak Kharka to Thorung Phedi or High Camp (4,925m/16,158ft).

Starting off today the trail crosses a broad yak pasture, then having dropped into a gully to cross a side stream it makes a short steep climb into the settlement of Ledar (4,200m/13,780ft), also situated on a yak pasture and with a safe drinking-water station. From here there is a superb view of the Trekking Peak of Chulu West (6,419m/21,060ft) and other peaks in this range. After a short walk from Ledar the trail forks right, to the east flank of the valley, on a new route created by ACAP, because the west bank trail has become dangerous. We arrange our stay either at Phedi (bottom of the mountains) or climb a little to high camp. Trekking time 3-4 hours.

Day 16 : Trek Thorung Phedi or High Camp to Muktinath (3,760m/12,336ft) crossing over Thorung la pass (5,416m/17,769ft).

Today we start our trek very early in the morning and shortly after setting off from Thorung Phedi or High Camp and traversing a steep scree slope, the trail enters a valley with a big moraine wall on the right ("moraine" being a ridge – like mass of earth, rock and stones deposited by a glacier in times past), crosses a stream and then continues to a simple teahouse at 5,100 meters (16,732ft). From this point the trail winds along among a series of moraine hillocks and then approaches the Thorung La Pass on a broad comparatively gentle slope. The pass is reputedly the world's highest, with the track peaking at 5,416m (17,769ft) – the highest point on the Annapurna circuit trek. In the pass there is another simple teahouse, which to quote, "can be a life-saver". After the long downhill trek from this point en-route to Muktinath (3,760m/12,336ft), one eventually reaches a simple lodge. This is the only point west of the pass where refreshments are available before reaching Muktinath, a village set in a grove of poplars and which is revered by both Hindus and Buddhists, attracting large numbers of pilgrims from all over the world. Trekking time 7-8 hours.

Day 17 : Trek Muktinath to Jomsom (2,720m/8,924ft).

On today's trek we first of all pass through the impressive medieval village of Jharkot (3,550m/11,647ft), built around the ruins of a mud-brick fortress. In addition to a Buddhist temple (gompa) and a covered archway (kani) and a Buddhist prayer wall (mani) the village has a post office, a traditional medical centre and several lodges. Continuing on through the picturesque valley of the Jhong Khola (River) we pass the small settlement of Khingar (3,280m/10,761ft), which boasts some lodges. A short distance further on we come to the “Romeo and Juliet” lodge. From this point the trail crosses a broad open scrub plain which is as wide as a jeep track and very easy underfoot. About a couple of hours after leaving Muktinath the route forks and we take the right-hand path for Kagbeni (2,800m/9,186ft), a medieval Tibetan – style village which has a few shops, a health post, post office, a police check point, an ACAP information centre and a safe drinking-water station. Kagbeni is the entry point for Upper Mustang region. From Kagbeni, we continue our trek further to Jomsom passing through the village of Ekle Bhatti (2,740m/8,990ft). Jomsom (also known as New Fort) contains facilities, including shops, banks, police check post, ACAP information office, a hospital, safe drinking-water station, post office, airline offices and even an airstrip. Trekking time 4-5 hours.

Day 18 : Fly Jomsom to Pokhara.

We take a regular flight from Jomsom to Pokhara in the morning. It is a short scenic flight for about 20 minutes. Then transfer to hotel. Pokhara is Nepal’s biggest tourist town. It has all the facilities and places of interest that one could possibly want and it is situated on the eastern shore of the gorgeous Phewa Tal (Fewa Lake) and the skyline is dominated by the perfect pyramid of Mount Machhapuchhare (6,997m/22,957ft). We have now free time for relaxation in Pokhara.

Day 19 : Drive/fly from Pokhara to Kathmandu.

We are more relaxed in Pokhara with the beautiful morning and later we drive or fly back to Kathmandu. Regular tourist buses leave at 7am.

Option available for extending your trip with Jungle Safari adventure, white water rafting or a trip of your choice.
